CABLE COMMUNICATIONS name of Rankin, for some misdemeanor, was put into the dark cell for punishment, and in a few moments blood was seen running through from beneath the door, and groans were heard from within. On opening the cell door he was found lying with his neck across his arm and a pool of blood around him. This so alarmed the guard that Dr. Bruce was sent for in haste, supposing that the man's throat was cut. It was found upon examination that he had opened a vein in his arm with a needle he had been using in the whip factory, where he works, and had then placed himself in the position in which he was found on purpose to alarm his keepers.
